FOREWORD

This year marks the fifth year of publication of the North Carolina Banking Institute journal in conjunction with the fifth UNC School of Law Banking Institute. In July of 2000, the UNC-CH School of Law recognized the impact of these two programs and formally established the Center for Banking and Finance. The charge of the Center is to serve the region's dynamic financial institution community, as well as to continue the successes enjoyed by the Journal and the Institute. The Center is the official sponsor of the annual Banking Institute and advises the student-run Institute journal.

The Center is currently engaged in the following projects:

- Research for and facilitation of meetings to discuss potential revisions to the North Carolina banking statutes.
- Establishment of a practitioners in residence program, which brings to the School of Law distinguished practitioners to share their expertise with students on cutting-edge issues related to banking and finance.

Practitioners in Residence for Securitization in the fall of 2000 were Brian Clarkson, Moody's Investors Service; Robert Hahn, Kilpatrick Stockton; Bradley Ives, Kennedy Covington Lobdell & Hickman; and Alan Kronovet, First Union Securities. Practitioners in Residence for Banking Law in the spring of 2001 were David Batty, Kennedy Covington Lobdell & Hickman; Tony Gaeta, Gaeta & Glesener; and Gene Katz, Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice.

- Sponsorship of two major conferences:

The 2001 Banking Institute, held for the first time in Charlotte, N.C. on April 5th and 6th. Speakers at the 2001 Institute included Hugh McColl, Chairman and CEO of Bank of America, Jerry Hawke, Comptroller of the Currency, and Tom Bliley, former Chairman of the House Conference Committee. Topics included banking the “unbanked,” functional regulation, privacy, technology, and cross-border transactions.

Co-sponsorship of The New World of Financial Services with the Securities Industry Association in New York City on Feb. 27, 2001. Speakers included Roger Ferguson, Vice Chair of the Federal Reserve Board.

- Creation of a new course on securitization.
- Preparation of legal scholarship and teaching materials, including an article recently published in the Journal of Corporation Law on banking and insurance, a manuscript for a new banking law casebook (to be published by West Publishing), and a manuscript for a coursebook on securitization (to be published by Lexis Publishing).
- Exploration of the possible creation of a community development law clinic at the School of Law.

The North Carolina Banking Institute journal is proud to announce its new presence on the Internet at <http://www.unc.edu/ncbank>. The website contains contact information and information about professional submissions, subscription requests, the annual Institute CLE (including a downloadable registration form), copyright releases, student membership, the Banking Center’s Board of Advisors, titles from past volumes, and a grouping of useful links to Internet sites related to banking and financial law.

The North Carolina Banking Institute journal is an essential source for anyone researching in the area of banking law or desiring to stay informed of the latest issues. Past articles and notes are available on both Westlaw and Lexis. Prior copies of the journal can be obtained by contacting the journal directly.

We are proud of what we have accomplished to date and look forward to broadening our outreach in ways that would be beneficial to you. Please contact the Center's director, Professor Lissa Broome, to share your ideas and to become involved in the Center's activities <lbroom@email.unc.edu>.
