A Letter from the Executive Board

Now in its twenty-eighth year, the North Carolina Journal of International Law and Commercial Regulation seeks to keep pace with the growing field of international law through the publication of articles by international scholars and practitioners, as well as by law students. Traditionally, the North Carolina Journal of International Law and Commercial Regulation has published three issues annually.

In 2001, the Journal passed a new milestone with the inception of its annual international law symposium. Now in its third year, the 2003 symposium sponsored by the North Carolina Journal of International Law and Commercial Regulation will feature a distinguished panel of speakers on the topic: "International Accounting Standards in the Wake of Enron." Our final issue of the year will be devoted to the symposium topic. We hope that it may serve as a comprehensive look at the current issues surrounding international accounting standards.

Now, the Executive Board is pleased to announce a new change. The decision has been made to expand our publication to four issues annually, beginning this year. By increasing our publication, we hope to be able to expand the number of articles published, while still devoting our final issue to the symposium.

The Executive Board of the North Carolina Journal of International Law and Commercial Regulation would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who have gone before us to make this journal into the outstanding publication it is today. We would also like to express our hope that it continues to contribute to improved understanding of the dynamic field of international law.
