This issue contains a note by Lemuel H. Gibbons, a former member of the Law Review staff, now a member of the Wilson, North Carolina Bar.

Publication of signed contributions from any source does not signify adoption of the views expressed by the Law Review or its editors collectively.

THE LAW SCHOOL

Registration for the one hundred and fourth year of the Law School of the University of North Carolina is two hundred and eighty-eight as compared with two hundred and eighty-five at this time last year. There are one hundred and twelve students in the first year class, ninety-nine in the second year class, seventy-six in the third year class and one graduate law student. Of the total enrollment, two hundred and eight, or 72.22 per cent, have college degrees. There are two hundred and forty-seven veterans now registered in the Law School. There are twenty-three students from outside of North Carolina. Ten students are women.
Mr. William Brantley Aycock joined the faculty in February, as Assistant Professor. Mr. Aycock received the B.S. degree from North Carolina State College in 1936 and the M.A. degree from the University of North Carolina in 1937. He was engaged as a teacher of history in the Senior High School of Greensboro, N. C. for two years, and was with the Federal Security Agency for one year. He was in active military service for four years and held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel at the time of his discharge. He took part in three campaigns in the European theater. Mr. Aycock graduated from the Law School of the University of North Carolina in January, 1948, with the J.D. Degree.

Professor Henry P. Brandis continued as a member of the special Commission on Administration of Justice in North Carolina. During the 1948 summer session, Mr. Brandis taught courses in Evidence and Municipal Corporations at the University of Texas Law School. During the present year, he is teaching a course in Evidence at the Law School of the North Carolina College, in Durham, N. C.

Professor M. S. Breckenridge is serving as adviser to a special committee on revision of the corporation laws of North Carolina.

Professor Frank W. Hanft continued as a member of the General Statutes Commission.

Professor M. T. Van Hecke’s edition of Cook’s Cases on Equity was published in September, 1948.

Professor Van Hecke and Dean Wettach have been serving occasionally as arbitrators in labor disputes.

During the summer session of 1948, the following program of courses was offered to one hundred and sixty-nine students: Conflict of Laws, by Professor Baer; Constitutional Law, by Professor Douglas B. Maggs, of Duke University; Personal Property, by Professor McCall; Public Utilities, by Professor Hanft; Trusts, by Professor Van Hecke; Government Control of Business (Anti-Trust Laws), by Professor S. C. Oppenheim, of George Washington University; Damages, by Dean Wettach; Insurance, by Professor Dalzell; Labor Law, by Professor Charles H. Livengood, of Duke University; and Wills, by Professor Aycock.

The following were elected, during the past year, to membership in the honorary Law School society of the Order of the Coif: William B. Aycock, James Dickson Phillips, Jr., Henry E. Colton, George L. Grantham, Jr., Donald W. McCoy and Alfred D. Ward.